The Assembly is organised for all those with a stake in historic designed landscapes and their conservation enabling them to meet and discuss current issues. Following the success of the GT's 'Compiling the Record' campaign, the Assembly will take "The 20th Century and Beyond" as its theme, with highlight speaker Kim Wilkie, celebrated designer of 'Orpheus' at Boughton House, sharing his impressions of the essence and personal inspirations of British design through the centuries and his hopes for landscape architecture in the coming century.

Discussions will include ideas for sharing historic parks and gardens with a wider audience; the place of research in conservation; and ways to drive our sector's renewed determination to be a combined force for good.

The Gardens Trust was born out of the 2015 merger of the Association of Gardens Trusts and the Garden History Society. A fresh organisation restated its role as a key conservation organisation working to protect designed landscapes. The Historic Landscapes Assembly brings together those working for the protection of historic designed landscapes, to discuss key issues demanding their collective attention.
