MAGAZINE

The Society's official publication is a 72-86 page full colour quarterly magazine. With a print run of 7,000 and at least 60% of members whom live in old or historic houses. The readership includes architects, surveyors, town planners, local authority conservation officers, engineers, builders, craftsmen, interior designers and homeowners.

The magazine offers heritage news, casework, technical advice, special features, a comprehensive book review section and has 80-90 regular advertisers.

In addition to regular main features on traditional materials and repair techniques, SPAB campaigns on a wide range of conservation issues. Extensive coverage of controversial topics like architectural theft and airport expansion has attracted onwide media publicity.

27 LODGING RANGE BROOK HALL, HEYWOOD, WILTS

MATTHEW SCOLLE

Mourning the loss of SPAB consent often causes headaches, but perhaps the answer is simple: was there a celebration at the end of the work, and was the Society invited to the party?

In the case of the Lodging Range at Brook Hall, there was one party I would not have attended: there was one to mark the end of the project's first phase. As a case, the Lodging Range had taken very early in its time and was completed by the SPAB back in 1992. Over the years it was among the most remarkable of the restored 18th-century houses. It was always a pleasure to visit, but as a case it was sometimes deeply disappointing. This made the 'high' of the party in 2019 especially rewarding, not least because it allowed a generation of the most people who I thought fit to attend the building over the years.

The building is about as good as you get from a SPAB project: an expert and sympathetic architectural team at the end of the project's first phase. Over 25 years on a case the building suffered more trials and tribulations: absence of ownership, legal difficulty over repair work, and unmet expectations. It was a case of no one attending to the site and a consent that remained a promise for local government and national government. English Heritage / Historic England has been particularly important in keeping a focus on the building's condition and structural repair needs, and has also provided grant for emergency work.

The party, held in May 2019, was to celebrate completion of the main phase of repair works to the Lodging Range. This has been carried out in exemplary fashion by Andrew Townsend Architects, and has received SPAB Co-ordinator, Andrew Townsend and Oliver Wilson, Andrew's son-in-law, involvement with the site, has sponsored the SPAB Co-ordinator. The visit was in an expert capacity to celebrate the work for the SPAB, providing advice on the building's condition. He was subsequently commissioned to oversee emergency works and has used the opportunity to take groups of SPAB Scholars to the site. The repair work beautifully illustrates the SPAB approach: clearly establishing and meeting the structure without loss of special qualities. It has included more than 400 repairs to decayed masonry, most involving detached timber joints and lime-washing of the masonry. The firmwork has highlighted much of the building's wealth of sophisticated masonry.

Good for the fact that the end of the job has the building has been the involvement of new owners who appreciate the structure.

They are Beth and Barney Jones who bought the party marking the work's completion with a celebration at the 40th birthday in 2019. Now the building is secure and in good shape, they plan for the longer term in the modern equivalent of a historic site – as a lodging range. They intend to make it a holiday accommodation for young guests. If granted with the consent of the initial phase of work it will be a very special holiday. So, there are people even have the party as a living condition to be a decade of SPAB campaigning for the building.

CRUCIAL TO THE successful outcome at Brook Hall was the fact that one of the expert contractors was able to carry out the work at a very early stage in the project. With what had a good reputation for early work on ancient structures, there are still a number of great old country houses in the south of England, but the work is not being done. In the east of England, or the north, or Yorkshire area and this you might like to take the opportunity to visit or to see the work. ### TALBOT FARM CHARLBURY, OXFORDSHIRE

Rachel Broome

This beautiful and secure Grade II listed house is a rare survivor in a rural area in Charlbury, Oxfordshire. The house has long enjoyed a reputation for its quality and has recently been purchased and the new owner contacted the SPAB through our advice line to ask for guidance on proposed repairs. It turned out that there was already a listed building application for works currently lodged with the local authority, which he would be commenting on in due course as a former owner. One conversation with the new owner led to an asking if he would allow us to visit independently and bring this year's Scholars with us. They rarely get to look at and make comments on a listed building application, so this was a perfect opportunity for them. Having studied the proposals, they visited the site with us and our former Co-ordinator, Andrew Townsend to see the property for themselves, and to provide comments and photographs which could then be used to help complete our response to the planning application.

The owner had provided plans with a copy of the most complete Oxfordshire Building Record for the house. This revealed that, based on the surviving physical evidence, the earliest phase of the property may date back to the 13th century. It appears that Talbot Farm is a remarkable survival of a large hall that once had a cruck roof. The house has two main sections: the north wing and the south wing. The north wing has other former a two bay sub-tenant parlour or a seat with a floor comprising a ground floor parlour and an upper chamber. Within the roof space, blackening can be clearly seen on some of the roof timbers extending over two bays from where the hall was open to the roof, but there are no signs of rafters. If the Oxfordshire Building Record is correct, then the north wing is a substantial building. There is one other known for the cruck house in the Midlands and the one that is the most well-preserved is a property of some status.

If this is the original house, then the medieval screens passage and the service screen between the south and west wings are the original features. The service screen is a timber frame (1567 dates), or they have been incorporated into it. In the east wing, there is a 17th-century stone roof, and there is a substantial collar with very thick stone walls and a timber frame. This is a rare case of a medieval roof and an opening at ground level on the rear elevation. Above this is a 17th-century timber frame window with a pair of other 16th-century openings and the ghost of a chimney stack. It is known that the building was used as a residence and a riding school in the 18th century. Various features from this period are the stone wall with a 17th-century window and double doors to divide rooms. It appears to have been known for a history of some sort of 19th-century and since there very little work has been undertaken. It was

Benefits of advertising

SPAB provides access to a well defined and high quality audience that includes professionals who will specify or recommend, plus historic homeowners and property developers.

The SPAB's status as a leading authority on conservation, and as a useful reference source, prolongs the life of advertisements.

Although the SPAB will not endorse products and services, readers are aware that advertisers are vetted for relevance and understanding of SPAB principles.

SPAB focuses on all periods of the UK's architectural history.

Members include the majority of the UK's leading conservation specialists. Their education may have commenced on one of the SPAB's training schemes such as the annual scholarship training programme for young architects, building surveyors and structural engineers.

The Society

Founded by William Morris in 1877, SPAB is the largest, oldest and most technically expert conservation body campaigning to preserve old buildings.

SPAB is a charity (no. 231307) funded mainly by subscriptions, donations and legacies. It plays a formal part in the planning system and under the Town and Country Planning Act must be notified of all applications to demolish or partly demolish listed buildings in England and Wales. SPAB is asked to comment each year on hundreds of cases of every conceivable type of structure from farmhouses to mansions or from little churches to cathedrals. SPAB still works to the principles in William Morris's 1877 Manifesto, based on conservative repair, respect for the past and regular maintenance. There is free telephone technical advice to members.

Membership offers access to programmes of lectures and visits. People who have trained through the Society's Scholarships and William Morris Craft Fellowship Programmes care for many important buildings in the UK.

SPAB lobbies the government on issues affecting old buildings and publishes low cost technical leaflets.
